THE RESULTS ARE IN!

A huge thanks to all of those who answered our very quick OACRAO survey concerning the future locations of our annual conference. We received 79 responses. The quick breakdown was as follows:

40 - Continue holding conferences at the state parks and cycle through the four we use.

27 - Go to a hotel for a year and then cycle through the state parks.

12 - Move strictly to hotels and stop using state parks.

Many responders provided qualitative comments about the future sites for the conference. Please know your Board will thoughtfully review each of these comments, as we plan for our future conferences. Stay tuned for announcements about future sites!

ANTIOCH COLLEGE

Antioch College announces the selection of Dr. Thomas “Tom” Manley as president-elect of the historic, start-up college in Southwest Ohio. Manley will begin his presidency in March 2016. Antioch’s current president, Mark Roosevelt, will step down on December 31, 2015, after completing his five-year contract. Andi Adkins, Antioch’s vice president for finance and operations, will serve as interim president. Manley will be the second president of the re-created Antioch College; a formal inauguration event will be held on Antioch’s campus in Fall 2016.

Manley brings to Antioch more than 35 years of experience helping individuals and organizations unleash their intellectual and creative powers through education. President of Pacific Northwest College of Art (PNCA) since 2003, he is credited for a turnaround that cemented PNCA’s position as Portland’s most well-rounded, diverse and most established arts institution. Among his milestones at PNCA are a successful brick-and-mortar expansion and cultivation of the largest gift to an arts organization in Oregon’s history.

Manley said his regard for Antioch’s historic role in advancing American higher education and his belief in its current vision and strategy led him to submit his candidacy for the presidency.
